FRANKFORT WARS ON PUNCH BOARDS

FOLKERS BLDG. THREATEND BY NIGHT FIRE

What might have been a serious fire was prevented Thursday evening when prompt action by the Frankfort Fire Department extinguished a blaze in the Folkers building. Faulty mechanism in the refrigerator at the Walsh Market filled the building and the Halverson apartment above with smoke. Floor boards had started to burn when firemen arrived and used the chemical extinguisher. Miss Lavergne Halverson was alone in the apartment at the time and summoned help. Damage was done by the smoke and it is likely a new motor will be needed for the refrigerator.

PERIOD OF VALIDITY OF FUEL OIL COUPONS OUTLINED BY THE OPA

The recent sudden cold weather brought an avalanche of inquiries to the Central Office of the Metropolitan Area of the OPA from individuals in nearly every part of the Chicago area asking information regarding the period of validity of fuel oil ration coupons and the periods they may be used.

The use of these coupons has been divided into five periods. Following are the facts applicable to the use of these coupons:

All grades of burning oils and kerosenes have been under ration since last October 1. Therefore stamp No. 1 may be used up to and including December 16.

Stamp No. 2 is valid from December 3 to January 6, but may be used until January 19.

Stamp No. 3 may be used from January 6 to February 22. Stamp No. 4 from February 7 to March 26. Stamp No. 5 from March 13 to September 30, 1943.

This over lap period accorded to each fuel oil ration stamp is to allow ample time for its use and to prevent last minute rush buying. It is possible to use both No. 1 and No. 2 between this date and December 16 affecting savings to users by larger deliveries as well as saving rubber and manpower by less frequent deliveries.

MAJOR C. J. JORDAN GUEST SPEAKER AT SERVICE FLAG DEDICATION

Dedication of the New Lenox Service flag was held in the New Lenox school auditorium Sunday afternoon with Victor Moore, principal of the school acting as Master of Ceremonies.

The dedication program opened with the singing of America led by Mrs. Arthur Papke. Next in order was the posting of the colors by the Wm. Martin Post VFW of Mokena. The pledge of allegiance was given by the New Lenox Boy Scout troop Nos. 49 and 60. Rev. B. E. Aman of the New Lenox Methodist church offered the invocation. This was followed by the audience singing America the Beautiful.

The Service Flag was unveiled by three service boys home on furlough, PFC Carl Friant, Pvt. Rudolph Stanek and Pvt. LeRoy Peterson. At the close of the unveiling The Star Spangled Banner was sung by the audience. Mary Jane Gougar read the roll call.

The guest speaker was Major C. L. Jordan of the US Marine Corps.

At the close of the address the following honored guests seated on the platform were introduced: The three service boys mentioned, Rev. B. R. Aman of New Lenox, Rev. Thomas Hagood of the Marley church, Rev. W. J. Geffert of the Mokena and New Lenox Lutheran churches, Father Roman of St. Jude's of New Lenox; Senator R. J. Barr and Editor Wm. Semmler. Father Roman pronounced the benediction.

The mothers of the boys in service were seated in the center section and each one was presented with a carnation by Mary Jane Gougar, Neoma Strasberg and Shirley Mangum. The Boy Scouts served as ushers.

The New Lenox Red Cross, Air Raid wardens, Canteen Unit and the VFW Auxiliary all attended in a body.

A picture of all the mothers was taken and will be made up on post cards to be sent to the boys in service.

ROLLER SKATING ENDS AT BACHELOR GROVE BALLROOM

Gas rationing is putting many roadside taverns and dance halls out of business. The Bachelor Grove ballroom is closing out. The last roller skating was held last Saturday night. Earl Lieder the proprietor says he may close up the place entirely for the winter or until a change is made in gas rationing.

ORLAND RESIDENTS MAKE BLOOD DONATIONS

Mrs. Geo. Cox, Mrs. Ralph Town and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morlock of Orland Park donated a pint of their blood for the Red Cross Blood Bank at the Mobile Blood unit at Palos Park last Saturday.

Gas Rationing Hits Fire Departments

Gasoline rationing is hitting local fire departments as shown at Frankfort last week. Last Friday night when fire threatened the Folkers building, members of the Frankfort Fire Department did not turn out in full force, some thinking the fire was out in the country. In cold weather the individual firemen cannot ride on the open fire truck and have been using their private cars to get to a fire. Many of these firemen only have an A gas ration card and did not feel they should be asked to use the gas they so badly need themselves. Mayor Geo. Sangmeister took the matter up with Chairman Frank Bray of the Will County rationing board, who advised the mayor to have the village purchase a station wagon for the purpose of getting the firemen to fires outside of the village and that gas for operating the station wagon could be obtained on a special rationing card, but the village of Frankfort does not feel inclined to spend extra money for a station wagon and finding a place to house it.

Mayor Sangmeister is asking all farmers in the Frankfort territory to be very careful and avoid any fires. Chimneys which cause most of the fires should be carefully checked to see that they are safe and screens placed on top of them to prevent sparks from escaping and falling on shingle roofs.

This is most commendable, and all present were very much pleased to hear of your action and instructed me as secretary of our organization to write and express to you our sincere thanks and appreciation.

Very truly yours,
George J. Rinke

Mayor George T. Jones of Joliet will be the guest speaker at the New Lenox Service Men's pot luck dinner to be served at the Emile hall in New Lenox next Tuesday evening. Mayor Jones is the head of the Will County OGD.

Contest was held on Sunday. The topic upon which the ladies spoke was: What I expect of the World after the war is over. There were a large number of states represented in the contest.

Mrs. H. Nugent, wife of the speaker of the House from Michigan was among the contestants. Ladies from New York State, Iowa and Illinois ranked high.

The highlight of the Sunday afternoon session was the address by Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minn., whose topic was, "Faith Of Our Fathers." The Governor was present at the convention last year when word flashed across the country of the attack upon Pearl Harbor. He left immediately for his post at the capitol, and was thus prevented from delivering his address then.

A very beautiful and impressive candlelighting vesper service was conducted by Rev. Newham of Evanston.

Mrs. W. H. Warnes of Tinley Park represented the Bremen Home Bureau at the all day session Sunday.

A. W. WALSH RESIGNS AS HIGHWAY COM.

GATHERING NYLON HOSE FOR POWDER BAGS

In order to provide necessary materials for powder bags used in the firing of heavy caliber guns the women of this region are asked to donate their old Silk and Nylon stockings. Don't give any that are wearable as the material will be reworked so large runs that put them in the discard as wearing apparel makes them just right for shooting purposes.

Only silk or Nylon are wanted, so don't put cotton or rayon or mixtures into the boxes which are provided for receiving stockings. These boxes will be found at your grocers.

Silk and Nylon only can be used for this purpose because these two products leave a minimum ash when burned. When one hundred pounds have been collected the boxes will be forwarded to the Defense Supplies Corp. N. Y. To make up a 100 lb. shipment requires about 1500 pairs of stockings, dig them all out of the dresser drawers where you put them when you thought you might get one more days use of them.

If someone calls upon you and asks your cooperation in the voluntary enforcement of a two and a half pound of meat per person per week don't think they, she or he, are a bit inquisitive for they are not. They will be making a survey for the Government.

TINLEY PARK A REAL TOY CENTER

This year with the shortage of rubber and gas rationing the people of the rural sections are inclined to do their Christmas shopping at home stores. Tinley Park has two fine stores loaded with Christmas goods, the Vogt Dept. Store and the Bettenhausen Hdw. Store. The latter has a fine toy department upstairs over the store. This is one of the largest toy lines this store has ever carried.

Santa Claus has already paid a visit at the Bettenhausen Hdw. Store and he will again be there Dec. 19. Look over the fine stocks of toys these stores offer.

These places and other business places in Tinley Park are filled with the Christmas spirit in spite of the war.

FRANKFORT RECEIVING ESTIMATES ON COST OF STREET SIGNS

Charles Bobzin, chairman of street and alleys has been asked to secure estimates on street signs. The committee will also work on the house numbering project in cooperation with the Lions Club.

DID YOU EVER SEE A BLUE BARN?

"Did you ever see a blue barn?" Harold P. Nutley, chairman of the Christmas Seal Campaign of the Will County Tuberculosis Association, is asking that question these days. In the last few weeks, his interest in barns has grown considerably, particularly in the color of barns.

The 1942 Christmas Seal was designed by Dale Nichols, one of America's outstanding artists and, true to his style, is a snowy country scene with a red barn in the background, the red barn that Mr. Nichols has immortalized.

Chairman Nutley says that recent survey by a farm journal among 25,000 farmers shows that 73 percent of them had red barns.

"I believe I know why farmers paint their barns red," he said. Isn't it because red paint is cheaper, holds its color in all kinds of weather, doesn't get dirty and sets off by contrast the other farm buildings? But, does the tradition of red barns go deeper than practical reasons?"

The 1942 Christmas Seal has caused more favorable comment than any seal in recent years, says Chairman Nutley.

But has anyone ever seen a blue barn? A special package of tuberculosis booklets will be sent to any one sending in the location of a blue barn in Will County and the name of the family living on the farm.

XMAS GIFTS MAY BE LATE IN ARRIVING

Postmaster Paul Rauhoff of Tinley Park calls attention to the fact that the public will be deeply disappointed this year by the late arrival of Christmas gifts. The public has been urged for weeks to mail their gifts early, but so far only a small amount of parcels have been mailed, but the flow of Christmas greeting cards is well under way and gaining each day. Postmaster Rauhoff again advises the patrons of the Tinley Park postoffice to be sure to start mailing their Christmas parcels right now if they expect to have them reach their destination in time for Christmas.

BOARD ASKS TAVERNS, STORES REMOVE BOARDS

Acting on several complaints the members of the Frankfort village board decided to order the removal of all punch boards from grocery stores as well as taverns. Another move was to enforce the ordinance prohibiting the use of window decorations which might obstruct a full view of the interior of taverns. Until this request is complied with no license will be issued.

Cannon In Mokena Pioneer Cemetery To Be Scrapped

The USA Quartermaster 6th Corps area thru its representative Wm. Martin Post VFW has asked for the return of all War Memorials. These may either be sold for junk and the proceeds used locally or donated.

The Mokena Civic Assn. is donating the 75 M M cannon it mounted in Pioneer Cemetery, with the hope that each pound will slap a Jap and it weighs 1000 pounds.

This Cannon was made in France in 1917 and was unique in its construction in that the center section was reinforced with solid brass swelled over the bore which shows much service. The Veterans of Foreign Wars will issue a receipt for the return and aid the Association in securing another memento of some kind after the war, just as they did this one, which was the only field piece of any description available at that time in the U. S.

THE WASSEL BOWL

The official Christmas drink of the United Service Organizations is "The USO Wassail Bowl". This beverage will be served at Christmas in more than 1,000 USO Clubs and units in this country and in off-shore bases.

The Wassail is an English drink representing "a wish for health and happiness". Wassail means "be thou well." It is drunk with friends with the toast- "Love and joy come to you- and to you Wassail too."

The recipe for the USO Wassail Bowl is as follows:

1 gallon cider, dash of grenadine, 6 egg whites separated and whipped, Allspice, Cinnamon, Crushed cloves, pint of milk or cream, Heat and serve hot.

HERE IS THE LINEUP OF THE 78th CONGRESS

The 78th Congress will meet on January 3rd, 1943. It may prove historic. Its first problem is to win the war. If the war terminates in 1943 or 1944, it will be confronted with the problems of peace, demobilization and post war reconstruction. In the Senate there will be 38 Republicans, 57 Democrats, 1 Progressive. The party ratio is close enough for carefully considered, sound legislation. In 1919, 1927 and again in 1931 there were 48 Republicans, 47 Democrats and 1 Progressive member. In the House will be 209 Republicans, 222 Democrats and 4 members from minor parties. Here again, the ratio is close enough for good results. In 1917, the ratio was 216 Republicans, 210 Democrats and 9 members from other parties. In 1931, it was 220 Republicans, and 214 Democrats. Most unbalanced party ratio in the entire history of Congress occurred in 1937 when there were 89 Republicans 333 Democrats. Unbalanced government too often provides unbalanced results.

ROCK ISLAND HAS RECORD BREAKING REVENUES

J. D. Farrington, Chief Executive Officer of the Rock Island Lines, announced that October gross revenues of $14,428,641 and Net Railway Operating Income of $4,814,467 after deduction of Federal Tax Accruals are the greatest of any month in the Rock Island's history. Mr. Farrington also stated that Net Railway Operating Income for the first 10 months' period of 1942 of $29,952,853 after accrual for Federal Taxes, is not only the greatest of any 10 months' period in the road's history but exceeds by $5,103,944 the peak figure of $24,848,909 for the entire calendar year of 1929. In October 1942 the ratio of transportation expenses to gross revenues was 25.66 and the ratio of total operating expenses to gross revenues was 52.09, both of which are the lowest ratios in the annals of the railroad.

MOKENA METHODIST CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

The Mokena Methodist Sunday School Christmas program will be held Sunday, December 20,

Removing Victims of Night Club Fire

Fire and rescue workers enter the smoldering ruins of the Cocoanut Grove night club in Boston to remove bodies of the dead and injured. This fire, the nation's worst since the Iroquois theater fire in Chicago in 1903, took a toll of about 500 lives. The fire was caused by a 16-year-old bus boy who lit a match so he could see to replace a ceiling light bulb. The match started an artificial palm tree burning.

Sinks French Fleet

The scuttling of the French fleet at Toulon, when the Germans stormed that great French naval base, was ordered by Admiral Jean de la Borde (above), commander-in-chief of the fleet. Sixty-three vessels, including three battleships, were in the harbor at the time, and 61 of these were believed lost. Thus were the Nazis deprived of the fleet on which Hitler had banked so heavily.

'Get the Message Through' Is Job of Signal Corps

In this war, instructions and reports, not only from plane to base but from ship to shore and field commander to officers, are sent by wireless. These pictures show some of the phases of signal corps training. At left, Moon Young, Chinese student, tries to perfect his diction so he can become a member of the signal corps and get out to the Southwest Pacific. He has a score to settle with the Japs. Center: Type of equipment used by planes to keep in touch with home bases and other planes during "dog fights." Right: Skilled fingers beat out messages on semi-automatic telegraph keys.

Always Being Bossed by Corporals

Members of the German armistice commission in French Morocco, captured by U. S. forces who landed there during the North African operations, are shown being marched off for internment by an American corporal. Taking orders from a corporal is nothing new for them. That was Der Fuehrer's rank in the German army.

Marine Chiefs Visit Guadalcanal Island

Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb (left), marine corps commandant, squints through field glasses at Guadalcanal field positions during his recent air trip to the Solomon Islands. Maj. Gen. R. J. Mitchell, marine aviation chief, who accompanied General Holcomb, and Maj. Gen. Alexander A. Vandergrift (right), commander of the ground forces in the Solomons, also trains his field glasses on a distant object.

Army Coffee Rationing Helps Civilians

More than a year ago the army quartermaster corps took steps to ration coffee. As the table top rotates, the army officers sniff and taste each sample of coffee, at the quartermaster depot, in Chicago, where 48,000 pounds of coffee is roasted daily.

Testing Tank Crews

There are two big rooms in the medical research laboratory at Fort Knox, Ky. One is kept at 120 degrees above zero; the other at 30 below. Tank crews eat, sleep and work on their tanks while doctors take notes. Here a sergeant climbs up and down a ladder toting a full pack while army medics measure his reactions so crews will be better cared for in tropical climes.

'Good Neighbors'

Captor and Captives in British 8th Army Push

Aids of Saboteur Get Death Sentence

"This looks like payday," said Hans Max Haupt (front right) shortly after he heard the death sentence pronounced on him and two other German-Americans who had given aid to his executed saboteur son, in Chicago. Behind Haupt is Walter Froehling, and behind Froehling is Otto Wergin, both condemned to death. The wives of the three convicted men were sentenced to 25 years in prison, and fined $10,000 each.

Paved Way in Africa

Tall man in center is one whom the writers of the history of the U. S. coup in North Africa will particularly mention. He is Robert Murphy, head of our consular force in France and its African colonies. Murphy prepared the groundwork for our occupation of North Africa. He is shown during a visit to Dakar being welcomed by M. Chapoulie, the colonial governor (in whites).

Fathers and Sons Inducted Into Army

'Priority' Dolls

With our second wartime Christmas approaching, American toy manufacturers are faced with priorities. Instead of dolls being made of rubber they are now made of wood pulp. Here an aide to Santa paints faces on the new kind of doll.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: An orphan, Charlotte (Cherry) Rawlings knows almost nothing of her early history when, according to the wishes of her guardians, Judge Judson Marshbanks and Emma Haskell, she becomes the secretary to Mrs. Porteous Porter, wealthy San Francisco invalid. Busy as she is, Cherry sees the judge from time to time and meets the members of his household; his dictatorial old mother; Amy Marshbanks, debutante daughter of his dead brother, Fred; and Fran, his gay young second wife. Shortly afterward Cherry learns, through Emma, that her mother (never married) had been Emma's sister, Charlotte; that her father had been the judge's brother, Fred—Amy's father—and that, shortly after Cherry and Amy were born, Cherry's mother had switched the two babies! Poor Cherry Rawlings is really the rich Amy Marshbanks. The judge confirms the amazing story, but to protect Amy his mother burns certain papers that would have proved it to be true. Meanwhile, Cherry had fallen in love with Kelly Coates, a young artist (who for a time had been infatuated with Fran Marshbanks); and Amy is determined to marry Count Mario (Gogo) Constantino. Cherry is jealous when Fran intimates she had lunch with Kelly at his Sausalito studio, but he tells her he hasn't seen Fran in weeks. Old Mrs. Marshbanks tells Cherry she resents her presence in the house. Judge Marshbanks is shot to death in his library and everybody in the house is under suspicion. Kelly finally convinces Cherry that he is over his infatuation for Fran and she agrees to marry him. Amy marries Count Gogo in Reno. Cherry discovers there are gunpowder marks on Fran's negligee. The police find love letters Kelly wrote to Fran.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XVI

"This is the first I've heard of this," said the old woman, in a voice of desperate resignation. "I only knew of it myself yesterday. I'd put them in a place that seemed absolutely safe. They ferreted them out."

Cherry had finished. She went to take the chair opposite the older Mrs. Marshbanks at the fire.

"Hello, everyone!" Kelly Coates stood in the doorway.

Cherry's heart gave a great spring, began to tremble with fear and pain. Oh, she did not want to see Kelly this morning, not after Fran's story of the letters, not after the wonderful day he and she had had together at Topocote!

She would have escaped, but there was no escape. He came in, greeting Fran and old Mrs. Marshbanks and Gregory, catching Cherry's hand as he stood beside her, but with no other look or greeting, and spoke at once of Amy's elopement. He hoped it had not too much distressed her grandmother.

"I don't know any good of him!" Mrs. Marshbanks said of Count Gogo, visibly touched by Kelly's solitude in spite of her stiff manner.

"At all events, Amy is a determined young lady and knows her own mind. She may mold him into just the husband she wants," Kelly said comfortingly. And then to Fran: "You telephoned that you wanted to see me about something?"

"Could we talk for a few minutes, Kelly?" Fran asked, rising. "Something has happened," Cherry heard her say as they went away together, "and I don't know how serious it may be."

Cherry's own heart sick with apprehension, she went through the gloomy big halls up to her own room a few minutes later. It seemed to Cherry that life would never be right and happy again. She was trying to master her tears when May came in with the message that Mr. Coates would like to see her a moment.

Kelly looked at her a moment, then squared her gently about with his big hands and asked her why she had been crying.

"I've felt—so horrible!" Cherry faltered, fresh tears welling in her eyes. She could not face him.

"What about, now, Marchioness? Nerves? Is all this beginning to get you?"

"Oh, Kelly, I'm so wretched about those letters! I knew—of course I knew," Cherry faltered, "that you were fond of Fran; I knew that just as soon as I met her, or you! But it hurts me so—it hurts me so—when I was so happy thinking that you and I would be together—to have this happen now! To have the police get them and the newspapers; it spoils everything!"

"Why does it spoil everything?" he asked gravely, still holding her lightly with both hands behind her shoulders. "Look at me, Cherry. This doesn't spoil anything. Do you mean that you don't want to come to Sausalito now?"

She smiled up at him through tears.

"Oh, Kelly, but it makes it all so horrid!" she said, even though hope was dawning in her voice.

"Cherry, you just said that you knew I'd cared—or that at one time some months ago, I thought I was crazy about Fran. I never asked her to come to Sausalito and run me; I never thought of her doing any such thing."

"Didn't she tell you about the letters?"

"Of course she did."

"You—you comfort me by just s-saying anything!" Cherry said, laughing with wet lashes. She seated herself in a big fireside chair, and Kelly came to sit on the broad arm, holding it to her hand.

"Let's have a—What about the letters?"

I had to tell them, Kelly she said breathlessly, apologetically.

"She had them, Kelly. And a day or so ago the police found them."

"So what?" she echoed dazedly. "So what?" she echoed dazedly.

"Can't they use them, Kelly? Can't they make it seem that perhaps if you loved her—?"

"Why," Kelly said, "what on earth do you suppose was in those letters, dear? Plans for murdering Jud Marshbanks?"

"You comfort me," Cherry whispered, her eyes shut. "You don't know how you rest me, Kelly!"

He twisted about a little so that he could get an arm around her. "What was in them?" she asked faintly.

"Well, I suppose the usual thing. That I was—oh lord—perhaps that I was happy in my new friendship for one of the most fascinating women I'd ever known," Kelly said, half amused and half impatient.

"There must have been more than that because she was so frightened."

"I'll be damned if I know what scared her," he said, in a genuinely puzzled tone. "She was beside herself. 'Kelly,' she said, 'it isn't for my sake but yours! Your career is ruined.' And she wanted me to take her away. 'Take me away and marry me!' she said over and over again."

"And what did you say?" Cherry asked, paling.

"I said that I loved you."

Her eyes filled again. Cherry could not speak.

"Then she said that I didn't know what might happen," the man pursued, still in the tone of one completely bewildered, "and I asked her what on earth she was afraid of. She said, 'You don't know, you don't know how they sound! You've not seen them for months.' It was the darnedest thing I ever knew."

As for the police and the press exploiting them and landing me in jail, why, it's just silly."

"And you really don't think there's anything dangerous in those letters?" Cherry asked on a long sigh.

"I know there isn't. What gets me is that she thinks there is."

"It's clearing, Cherry. Get on your coat and rubbers and tie something over your head. We'll go for a walk."

"If I can keep my feet on the ground!" she said, adding in a long tone, "Oh, Kelly, it'll be so good to get out of this house some day and into the free, open air and to forget everything that's gone on here!"

"Don't you think sometimes of the fact that if things had gone just a little differently you might be a rich woman, Marchioness?" he asked, as they walked along the wet sidewalks, leaning against the wind.

"No; I never thought of it, really. I wouldn't want it. I'll feel so rich as your wife, Kelly," Cherry said, "that it would just be a bother to me. Just to be over there, alone with you," she continued, gesturing towards the far hills, "there's no money in the world that could tempt me to give up a minute of it!"

"It's going to be a great adventure," Kelly said.

"It's going to be heaven! I can't believe it yet."

They paced along together, facing the wind.

"Oh, I'd forgotten, what with Amy and everything," Cherry said suddenly. "Yesterday when I was in Fran's room, and she was showing me the overnight case that the police had broken open when they got your letters, she went into the bathroom to take a shower and while she was there the wind blew in through her closet—and I went in to close the window—and one of her dressing gowns blew against my hand, and Kelly—she'd wiped a pistol barrel on it! No mistake. Grease and gunpowder, and it was all puckered up."

"What are you talking about?" the man demanded, interrupting. "Fran had wiped the barrel of a revolver on one of her dresses?"

"One of those negligees she wears. And that was what she had on when she ran downstairs that night—when we'd all heard the judge shouting and we all ran to our doors. The minute I saw it I remembered it, although I'd forgotten it until then."

"Forgotten what?"

"That that negligee was what she had on."

"But someone would have seen her if she'd picked up the gun."

"Not necessarily. We were all so frantic! But, Kelly," Cherry went on impressively, laying a gloved hand on his shoulder, "this is the strange thing. Fran did have that negligee on at first, but when the police and the doctor and all the others got there she didn't. She had on only her nightgown, for she was shivering with cold, and one of the maids went and got her an overcoat from the hall closet."

"Ha!" Kelly said, his brow knitted. "Sure of that?"

"I'm absolutely sure. The first thing I saw when I opened my door was that the halls were lighted, and May and Molly and Helene, the other maid, were coming down from the upper floor, and Fran halfway down the stairs saying it was nothing, that we mustn't get excited, and wearing that negligee. But when the doctor and the police got there, she didn't have it on."

"She could have run upstairs, hung it up, and gone down again without anyone's noticing?"

"Easily—it was a madhouse for a while. And nobody was watching or checking."

"She wiped that revolver on the first thing that came handy, a fold of her dressing gown," Kelly formulated it slowly. "And then it occurred to her that the stain would be a hard thing to get rid of. She couldn't count on anything she had to clean it with."

"She grabbed that gun instinctively and cleaned it before she realized that if those smudges were discovered matters would be worse than ever," Kelly continued. "So she took the boldest course and as it turned out the safest one. We're not far from Fisherman's Wharf, Cherry; how about an oyster stew?"

"Oh, Kelly, I'm starving!" She laughed her old joyous laugh as he caught her arm tightly in his, and they went along together at a walk that was almost a run.

The restaurant was as plain as coarse linen and cheap chairs could make it, but the fragrance of the boiling crab ketzles outside scented the place appetizingly.

"Honestly, Kelly, is there one chance in the world Fran did it?" the girl presently said.

"I don't think so. I'd swear she didn't have the nerve. But it strikes me—it's seemed to me all along—that her position is that of someone who knows something, or thinks she does; she's protecting someone. But who? Amy? The old lady? I don't know. Here are our oysters."

"It's just one o'clock," Cherry said, "and I think I'll telephone home that I'm not coming."

When she came back she sank into her chair, gripping the table, trying to speak.

"Cherry, what is it? What's the matter?" Kelly stammered, catching at her hands.

"It was Mullins," she whispered. "They want us to come straight home. She said—she said she and Jud had quarreled—over you. Fran has confessed!"

When they went out onto the wharf looking for a taxi, Cherry held Kelly's hand tightly.

"Fran's confessed, eh?" he said more than once. "I wonder what that means? Why does she drag me in? She knows darned well that whatever she's up to I'm not in it."

"But—she could say you were!"

"Yes, but that's not enough."

"Kelly," she said, when they had signaled a cruising taxi and were on their way, "promise me something."

"Anything," he said.

"Promise me that no matter what happens now, no matter how tangled things get, you and I are—forever and eternally—bound to each other!"

"Why, my darling, my darling," he said, "my life is your life now. Here we are!" he finished abruptly, as the cab drew up at the imposing Marshbanks doorway. "Now we'll try to see what all this is about."

There were four officers there now, instead of the usual one or two; Fran was there, too, silent, very pale, tragic-looking, with her white skin and raven-black hair.

"I had to tell them, Kelly," she said breathlessly, apologetically.

"I'm sorry. I thought for a while that we could hide it. But I had to tell."

Washington, D. C.

QUIET CONFIDENCE

It brought no headlines, but Chief of Staff General Marshall made the first step toward better co-operation between Capitol Hill and the Executive Branch of the government by holding a quiet conference with key senators and representatives.

He gave them an intimate, and on the whole optimistic, progress report on the war, which left a good impression with congressional leaders. Both Republicans and Democrats were present, most of them from the military affairs committees, and also the vice president, the speakers and other leaders.

General Marshall gave the actual figures on American losses in North Africa. These must remain confidential, but they were encouragingly small. He explained that one reason for the light casualties was General Eisenhower's peace arrangement with Admiral Darlan.

General Marshall attached great importance to this, since the army, navy and civilian population in North Africa were under the influence of Admiral Darlan. Therefore he suggested to congress that it would be very helpful if there were no critical speeches of the admiral despite his Vichy connections.

Admiral Darlan had come to visit his son who was stricken with infantile paralysis, General Marshall said, then had returned to France. But when his son suffered a relapse, Darlan came back to North Africa. Thus it was pure accident, but a very fortunate one, that he was in Algiers at the time. Darlan had given the order immediately which resulted in the saving of many American lives.

General Marshall also paid high tribute to Robert Murphy, the state department's charge d'affaires in France, who spent most of his time in North Africa. It was Murphy who mapped out most of the advance political plans of the U. S. army.

General Marshall was also optimistic regarding the amount of Nazi strength being diverted from the Russian front, especially airpower. He felt that Hitler would have to take more and more planes away from Russia to protect Italy, now considered the soft spot of the Axis, and that Hitler could not lick Russia without airpower.

Another optimistic part of the war picture, the chief of staff said, was New Guinea, where he expects some real Allied progress against the Japs at Buna.

Note: Secretary of the Navy Knox is now following Marshall's cue and has invited members of the senate and house naval affairs committees to have dinner with him some evening soon. As a result of the elections, it looks as if the executive branches of the government had awakened to the fact that there was a congress.

HITLER INFLUENCE

If Hitler moves in on Spain, he may accomplish at one blow what we have failed to do in nine months of diplomatic discussions with Argentina. He may force that South American country into a break with the Axis.

It was Argentina which principally gunned the works at Rio de Janeiro last January, when astute Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, was trying to line up all 21 Latin-American countries behind a resolution to break relations.

There Argentina Foreign Minister Ruiz Guinazu insisted on "neutrality" and Argentina remained on the fence.

Ruiz Guinazu is a great admirer of Spain, is proud of his own Spanish blood. Furthermore, he points to Spain's "tradition of neutrality" as the best guarantee of peace.

So if the Germans now attack Spain, the Argentine government would almost be forced to come to the defense of the mother country by breaking relations with the attacking country.

Note: Resignation of Argentine War Minister Tonazzi, a friend of the United States, is regarded here as the first important rift in the Castillo government.

COURTEOUS

MRS. CORDELL HULL

Mrs. Cordell Hull was leaving the Shoreham hotel one morning when she encountered Dr. Jose Richling, former minister of Uruguay.

"Can I take you somewhere?" she offered.

"I'm going to the state department," said Richling.

"Come along, I'll take you."

"But are you going that way?"

"No, but it doesn't matter. I have nothing to do. Anyhow, I want to see how my husband works."

CAPITAL CHAFF

In spite of space shortage, a magnificent suite of offices in the state department is still reserved for the venerable "General of the Armies." Unfortunately Pershing has to spend all his time at the Walter Reed hospital.

The U. S. army in North Africa will consume local fruits and vegetables, not to mention lamb and mutton, produced there in large quantities, and formerly shipped to Italy, France and Germany.

Wendell Willkie and Global Politics

By Frank Gervasi

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

Wendell Willkie's recent visit to the Middle East was the second of two memorable events during the last days of August and early September. The first, of course, was the defeat of Rommel's Afrika Korps.

This, among other things, caused stocks to rise on the Cairo Bourse. The victory over Rommel removed an immediate threat to Egypt and at least put our side in a position to resume the initiative—as they say in treatises on war.

The enemy lost a considerable quantity of men and weapons. The myth of Rommel's invincibility was destroyed in a brief hot battle which was over almost before anybody knew it had begun. It was as brief as it was hot and almost as destructive to the German war machine as a short circuit in a generator.

There's no tendency here, however, for the British to overestimate the damage done to the Afrika Korps or to underestimate Rommel's ability to recuperate.

Two Events Collide

The two events—the victorious battle and Willkie's arrival—coincided so closely that they became confused. The newspaper boys hardly had time to cover the first event before it telescoped into the second, and they were very busy with the second. The blitz visit was crisscrossed with statements, interviews, receptions, appearances before still and movie cameras, radio talks, calls on diplomats and kings, conferences with politicians, soldiers and more diplomats.

Short as it was, the correspondents worked harder and longer during Willkie's visit than at any time while away from the fighting front. Willkie shook up their livers.

He sassed the censors, made formal diplomatic calls in a lounge suit instead of the sacred striped pants and tail coat of tradition. He managed to impart to nearly everything he did an atmosphere of clambake. Censorship, motivated by the sheer necessity for keeping Berlin in the dark as to Willkie's views about political and military affairs in the Middle East, prevented details of his visit from becoming known. This article is an attempt to supply some of those missing details.

In any other setting, the breezy politician might have seemed a heroic figure, remarkable for his frankness and sincerity. In the Middle East, however, with its traditions of reticence, its compunctions of secrecy in political and military matters, Willkie's act didn't quite come off. He was usually out of character and seemed, most of the time, a huge and handsome bull in a store full of porcelain images. Every time he moved, you wanted to warn him that he might break something.

Willkie, Image Breaker

He did some good but he also broke a few images. The damage occurred despite the presence in his cruise crew of Joseph Barnes, soft-spoken former newspaper man who now is an official in the Office of War Information. Joe was the conscience of the party, a small voice which kept saying: "Be careful, Wendell! Somebody might be trying to sell you a bill of goods. Watch what you say and remember this is a British battlefield and they are the bosses here."

Calls on King Farouk

He didn't prevent Willkie, however, from calling on His Majesty King Farouk of Egypt in an ordinary suit, or from having himself photographed in a sloppy bush shirt, baggy pants and an outside sun helmet, with German prisoners who stood rigidly at attention and regarded him with considerable coolness.

Willkie's first plunge into Middle East affairs happened in the marbled hall of the impressive headquarters of the United States forces in North Africa, formerly the home of a wealthy Egyptian family. The active and passive press, uniformed and ununiformed, male and female, American and foreign, were there about seventy strong. Even the Times of London came; so did British and American censors.

Willkie, in a summer-weight single-breasted suit, his pants belt tight around his middle, his hair rumpled, and looking very much a man of the people in his white shirt and unremarkable necktie, sat on a chair before a table set on the first landing of a staircase that swept upward behind him. There was a shaft of light on his face from an open door. He reassured us that the Yankees were doing well.

Then he turned prophet. He announced that, in his opinion, Hitler was 'way out on a limb and that the tide had turned against the enemy.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In 749 war production plants, 75 per cent of 434,600 workers arrive by private automobiles. That's why war workers must have tires.

When it is understood that 54,000 communities in this country depend entirely upon highway transportation, the importance of the rubber situation will be appreciated.

There were 10.78 pounds of crude rubber in the average passenger car tire made in 1940. In 1941 the rubber content was increased to 10.85 pounds.

The overall weight of the average passenger car tire in 1940 was 21.88 pounds, while in 1941 it was 21.69 pounds.

There is a farmer in Osborne, Iowa, who still carries as a serviceable spare, a tire that came on his car as original equipment in 1917. He jacks up the wheels when the car is not in use.

Dear Friends:
Well I finally got some time to write to you. Please forgive me for not writing sooner. I've been very busy lately, have been put to a different job. I am now working as a battalion motor mechanic and like it very much. Before I started this job I was a driving instructor for Officers Candidate school. Sure had long hours then. Now my hours are from 7:15 till 6 in the evening. Well so much for that.

I certainly want to thank you for the box I received from you. Certainly is nice to receive something like that. The shaving kit was just what I needed, and the cigarettes, although I don't smoke, there were some of the boys that do, and they sure liked them very much.

I am still out here at Fort Sill and still in the same outfit. There are still rumors of us going across, so don't know when I'll leave.

The weather here has been cold lately, and such strong wind. They tell me the winters out here are very cold, but I guess the soldiers will be plenty warm. We have nice warm clothing to wear and plenty of it.

I have been receiving the Times regularly. Sure is good to hear about news from home. I must thank you again for everything. Keep up the good work, Citizens Service Committee, and I know you will make a lot of the home town boys happy. So for now I'll say "So long till next time."

I remain, your friend,
Glenn

Dear Friends:
Just a few lines to let you know that I received the cigarettes when I got back here from my furlough. Thanks a lot for them.

We are going to leave Ft. Leonard Woods, Mo. soon, so the address in this letter is temporary. Will send the new address as soon as possible.

Well I guess I'll close, hoping this finds you all well. And thanks again for what you people are doing for us fellows in service. I am sure that everyone of us appreciate it.

Sincerely,
Your Friend

Dear Friends:
The boys have just gone to retreat and I have a few minutes time while waiting for the hour when I can leave Camp for Augusta. I received the Tinley Park paper and cigarettes today and want to thank all you folks responsible for the great work shown for the boys in service.

The weather has been grand all of the while that I have been here, the days are warm and the nights cool. The entire camp is surrounded by hills with nothing but sand to walk on. We sleep in tents large enough for five beds. Three of the fellows from my tent are being moved Wed.

I imagine by the time this letter reaches you I will be moved from this camp too. I won't be told where I am going but it would sure seem good to get on a train heading north.

Before I close I want to say hello and good luck to all the boys in service. Thanks again.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God the Only Cause and Creator" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, December 6.

The Golden Text was, "All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name. For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone" (Psalms 86: 9, 10).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Thus saith the Lord the King of Israel, and his redeemer the Lord of hosts; I am the first and I am the last; and beside me there is no God. Fear ye not, neither be afraid: have not I told thee from that time, and have declared it? ye are even my witnesses. Is there a God beside me? yea, there is no God; I know not any" (Isaiah 44: 6, 8).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The substance, Life, Intelligence, Deity, are reflected by His creation; and when we subordinate the false testimony of the corporeal senses to the facts of Science, we shall see this true likeness and reflection everywhere. God fashions all things, after His own likeness. Life is reflected in existence, Truth in truthfulness, God in goodness, which impart their own peace and permanence" (p. 516).

Gas Service for War Industry plus Home Use

ARE you heating your home with gas? If you are, you may be asked to turn down your thermostat to 65 degrees on coldest days this winter.

Why?

Because, today, the gas that feeds your furnace also feeds vital war production—a very large amount is being used to make essentials for our Armed Forces—some plants require millions of feet each day.

That's why you may be asked to turn down your thermostat—particularly in severe weather when demands for gas are greatest, and why you should not use your range oven to help heat your home.

IN the meantime, even on moderate days, use it wisely—keep temperatures at a minimum for comfort; cook economically; don't use more gas than you need for water-heating.

For gas, too, has gone to war.

DON'T WASTE IT!

County Town Commissioners Are Installed

Five county commissioners from the county towns—four veterans and one newcomer to office—were inaugurated for their four year terms on the county board, Monday noon, in simple ceremonies consistent with the spirit of the first anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day.

County Commissioners Wm. Busse about to begin his forty-first year on the board; Geo. A. Miller his twenty-fifth year of service and county commissioners Geo. F. Nixon and Wm. N. Erickson re-elected, and John Mackler the new elected commissioner, all pledged themselves to continue to seek economy in county governmental affairs, reduction of payrolls where possible, and to work for the best interests of the people of Cook County. All five are Republicans.

Mr. Busse is probably setting a new record for public service in Cook County having been, except for a two year term in 1912-14, continuously re-elected since 1900. The commissioners all carried the county towns by majorities running from 71,000 to 77,000 votes. All have been active in civic and community affairs in their home communities and their inauguration was viewed by many friends and well wishers from the county towns.

Women in War Work

★ They wear no uniforms, handle no weapons of war, pilot no fighting planes—these unseen aides behind the battle lines in America's War for Freedom.

★ But they are fighting at busy switchboards here at home. Fighting just as faithfully in their appointed places as their brothers in roaring tanks and screaming planes and rushing ships.

★ Under their flying fingers, the vital messages of war speed on to bring the day of final Victory!

SERVING 24 HOURS EVERY DAY

Speeding the urgent messages that help our fighting men and hurt our enemy, messages by hundreds and thousands and millions, aiding the nation's war job and serving the public welfare.

Messages moving our armed forces for combat action... directing war strategies... guarding against enemy threat... guaranteeing life and property in emergencies... raising war production... delivering vital supplies... maintaining public services, public health, public safety... aiding national and local officials in the complex business of winning this war and saving our Way of Life.

Right now, in the Illinois Bell area, there are more than a dozen military and naval stations, in addition to plane, tank and munitions plants, busy railroad lines and steel mills and coal mines and oil wells, great farms and many other war producers—all materially aided in their united aim by these women in war work.

Wasting Money and Wasting Men

Donald M. Nelson said recently that the size of the military was running ahead of the capacity of the nation to arm it. He might have said that production is failing to keep up with enlistments because men working 40 hours a week and the thousands in non-essential public jobs are not contributing their fair share to the war program. As one writer says, there is no shortage of men; the trouble is in the use to which they are put and in the limited hours that too many of them spend on their jobs.

More and more people are convinced that the time has come to change several hundred thousand political job-holders from non-essential to essential tasks, and to give up peacetime labor limitations for a policy wherein the watchword shall not be fewer hours, but more work. Until we do match labor hours with the critical needs of the tremendous undertaking ahead of us, and until we do eliminate every possible non-military expenditure, we will be wasting both money and manpower at a time when both must be conserved if victory is to be speedily won.

Civil Service Report.

A late report of the Civil Service Commission shows that there are more than 12,000 men in the miscellaneous divisions of the Office of Emergency Management and 17,000 men in the Office of Price Administration. These are but examples of what must be called a misuse of manpower.

As for the waste of money on non-essential projects and activities, there are evidences on every hand—federal, state, county and municipal. More men must be moved to jobs where they are needed; to the factories producing arms and the farms producing food. Industrial workers must put in more hours on their jobs to match the long hours farmers work. Civic spending for non-essentials and unnecessary pay-rolls must be cut in the interest of a united war effort.

Are these things too much to ask for a nation that is making its supreme fight for the preservation of principles and privileges that have made it our Free America?

Social Security A Taxing Machine

The facts upon which Senator Vandenberg insisted that social security taxes be held at their present level, instead of being increased, are well worth remembering.

We are all familiar with the present social security law, whereby employers deduct the tax of one per cent from the employee's pay check, match it with an equal amount, and from time to time pay the total into the Federal social security fund. Under the original law, both the deduction from the employee's pay and the equal amount added by the employer would have been doubled on January 1, 1943.

Collections at the present rate from employers and employees in the last fiscal year amounted to about one billion dollars. Disbursements were only one-seventh of that sum. Cash reserves in this fund go directly into the general Treasury, for disbursement, and are represented by special government IOU's. There are more than three billion dollars worth of these IOU's in the Treasury.

Senator Vandenberg insisted that present reserves are six times the total needed under the benefit payment plan of the government for the next five years, and more than 30 times the amount of reserves which Secretary Morgenthau said were necessary when the law was passed.

Disguised Taxation.

With these facts in mind, it would seem plain that the present social security vehicle is being used as a disguised tax collecting machine. The special IOU's of the government depend upon the ability of the government to pay their face value from taxes when cash is needed. There is no reserve at interest which can be liquidated to produce the amount necessary to pay social security policies when due.

Privately operated insurance has gained and held the high point of public respect for many years because it has never mixed other objectives with insurance. Premiums charged have been in harmony with the over-all cost and the benefits derived by the insured. Whenever an excess has occurred, private insurance companies have returned part of the excess collections to policyholders in the form of dividends, or as an alternative, permitted extra insurance.

If social security by the government is not to become known as a disguised tax collecting medium, the benefits and payments must be balanced, and kept in balance.

Labor on the Farm Front

The farmer is a worker, always has been, always will be. Nor is the length of his day measured by arbitrary hours. He labors until the job is done. Never was this more true than in this war emergency.

Keeping 'Em Rolling

"The farm front is the war food front, and they are determined to 'keep 'em rolling' down the food assembly line."—Miss Bess Rowe.

The Deadly "Gimme" Bug

We had always been taught that the bacteria coli, causing typhoid fever infection, was the most persistent and feared of all bacteria. We have learned in the last 10 years that the "gimme" bug is much harder to cure than the typhoid bacteria ever was. Perhaps our failure to do away with civic waste and useless pay-rollers in the face of our supreme effort during this wartime emergency is due to the fact that science and plain American common sense have not had the opportunity to develop an antidote for the "gimmies."

Citizenship and American History

"Is American history taught in your schools? In 22 states the study of the nation's history is not required. This shocking fact is stated by Allan Nevins, an Illinois farm boy who has become a foremost biographer and historian, in the New York Times. In 26 states some history teaching is required, but even the conscientious 26 are often vague and unexact, Nevins says. How can American institutions be understood if the schools do not teach history? Can sound citizenship be taught without teaching history? When one considers that the entire reason for state support of education is that an educated citizenry is necessary if representative government is to work, it is hard to understand the lack of emphasis on history. Better throw out something else." — Wheeler McMillen, Farm Journal.

Mr. McMillen is right. A nationwide survey shows that 82 per cent of the colleges in the United States do not require the study of United States history in order to graduate, and 72 per cent do not require United States history for admission. Less than 10 per cent of college students were enrolled in American history classes, and only eight per cent of the freshmen, although 30 per cent were studying European or world history.

Importance of What We Teach.

In an able pamphlet, "What Are We Facing," a leading educator calls attention to the fact that what we teach may be even more destructive than not teaching at all. "Instead of stressing the sturdy virtues and characters of the virile pioneers who were carving out of the wilderness a nation and asking only the help of God . . . the chapter describes these empire builders as 'They were greedy for wealth, for individual power, for freedom.' And again another book by the same author: 'The United States is not a land of opportunity for all our people, for one-fifth of the people do not earn any money at all.'"

How can we expect unity among our young men in this war to preserve our American system and our freedom of opportunity if they have been taught ideas like these in school?

Perhaps we had all better start reading our children's school books if we are to discover where some strange ideas really come from.

Only in a Free Country

One of the large life insurance companies is currently publishing a cartoon showing a policy holder standing in the office of a state insurance department. To the man at the information desk he says: "I'd like to see the latest report on my life insurance company."

And the line under the cartoon reads: "Where does this happen except in a free country?"

About 70 per cent of all the world's life insurance is owned today in the United States, where life insurance is truly a servant of the people. This form of protection has been developed under the American system of free enterprise and economic opportunity.

Life insurance thrives only where men are free to plan their own futures. The people of this country do not want or propose to lose that freedom.

Good Management

"This country is depending far more upon efficient railway service than in any previous war," says Railway Age. "In fact, because of the tremendous expansion of war production, fully one-half of the railroad plant—yards, tracks, cars, locomotives, signals—may be considered as much a part of Uncle Sam's war machine as are guns, tanks and bombers."

Saving a War-Torn World

Dr. Gustav Stolper, nationally known economist, says:

"By the end of the war the United States will be the only great industrial power on earth with physically intact facilities and an intact social fabric. In the rest of the world a tremendous reconstruction job lies ahead which will require large-scale American contributions."

But only private enterprise can do this job in a free society, according to Dr. Stolper. America must retain its present system, "for the civilized world cannot survive without American leadership."

Mrs. H. Kruspe,

To Whom it may concern:

I received your letter some time ago, due to my military duties I just couldn't find time to answer your very fine letter, for I had been moved several times and I also was on duty in Fort Bliss, Tex., on a military mission which of course took some time but now I hope to be stationed here for a while. I do hope so.

I also received the carton of cigarettes which you mailed to me Oct. 31st. I don't know how to thank the American Legion Woman's Auxiliary Unit, for the wonderful work they are performing for all the men in service and also all the time that you all put in for the flag dedication and all the other duties you are doing. What to Grow in 1943

SOME INFORMATION ON FLAX SEED PRODUCTION IN ILLINOIS/AS GIVEN BY THE AGRICULTURE EXPERIMENT STATION AT URBANA.

TIME OF SEEDING—

Seed early for best results.

RATE OF SEEDING—

45 to 56 pounds per acre.

DEPTH OF SEEDING—

1/2 to 1 inch deep.

ALFALFA—

Flax makes an excellent nurse crop for Alfalfa.

IS FLAX HARD ON THE LAND?

Below is a chart comparing Flax with other Grain crops.

Crop	Yield		Fertilizing Constituents in Lbs. per Acre
	Per Acre	Bus.	Ni.	Phos.	Pot.	Cal.	Mag.
Flaxseed	11.3	20.8	3.6	5.1	1.1	1.7
Corn	67.9	68.5	10.3	12.9	.7	4.9
Oats	66.4	41.6	7.7	10.2	1.7	2.5
Sp. Wheat	20.7	27.3	5.2	5.3	.5	1.9
Soy Beans	30.9	103.3	12.8	35.4	3.7	5.6
Barley	40.2	35.5	7.1	9.1	1.0	2.3
Rye	31.6	33.1	6.5	8.7	.7	1.3

According to the above data, flax removed less nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium and magnesium than any other grain crop. Soy beans removed about five times as much as flaxseed.

Grow a crop you can harvest in the summer, one that is easy on the land, and one that you can sell for cash at the crushers at Chicago Heights. Field-run flaxseed sold for about $2.50 per bushel (56 lbs.) this season.

We have a good supply of home-grown Bison Flaxseed on hand which yielded about 20 bushels per acre.

that we haven't many men left in town.

All that I can do is send my very sincere compliments and especially you Mrs. H. Kruspe. I read in your letter that you are having cold weather at home, so far here it has not been as yet, for the nights are cool, and in the day it gets fairly warm and so far we have not had any rain for a long time but I guess that is real good, for the cotton pickers. I don't know if you ever saw a cotton field but it sure is a beautiful sight to behold. The fields look just like when we have snow.

I'm trying to get a furlough for Christmas so that I will be home for the holidays. So I am thanking you again.

I pay you my best regards,
Gust Zerbs.

Mrs. Elsie Yunker, President of the American Legion Auxiliary and Mrs. Lilah Kruspe, spent a couple of very busy evenings last week wrapping the Christmas gift packages for Service men of Orland Park and Orland Township, over fifty packages having been mailed and packed to date. They contain boxes of cigarettes, pkgs. of candy, candy rolls, candy bars and razor blades. Many thanks to Mr. Creer for donation of wrapping paper, Mr. R. Jergenson for forty eight candy rolls and a cash donation from Mrs. Gilbert Sayers.

With these packages goes the most Sincere Christmas Wishes, to all the Boys in Service, from the American Legion Auxiliary, the Community, and your Service chairman.

Labor Shortage A Crucial Problem

As our armed forces increase, we will require a greater labor force to supply them with food and materials. Already a serious shortage of labor has occurred on farms. This shortage is made up of about one-third responding to the draft and two-thirds lured by higher wages in war factories.

Patriotism demands that we approach this question of labor shortage realistically and with absolute fairness and impartiality.

Hours of work on farms already are at the limit. To the extent that exchange of labor and cooperation among farmers can help in this situation, farmers must use all of their ingenuity in planning to get their work done.

Industry and labor must do all in their power to relieve the pressure of rural labor from farms to factories.

A Noteworthy Comparison.

The average work-week in Great Britain is 56 hours. In American industry the average work-week is 42.4 hours. If the American work-week were increased to 48 or 50 hours, 20 per cent could be added to the volume of war materials produced by present factory personnel.

The President has proposed training the million or more persons now physically handicapped, and in the long run this additional source of labor may bring substantial results.

However, an immediate extensive gain in productive labor can be had from public employees now in non-essential civic activities of federal, state and local governments. Every one of these civic departments should be combed for non-essential employment. Civic employees in the War Department alone are reported to have increased from 328,000 in July, 1941, to 1,100,000, and Navy civilian personnel to about 500,000.

Bad Practices in War Time.
During times of depression, labor practices have grown up designed to create work and require additional employees. Limitations on the amount of work produced by individual workmen may have had a place under depression conditions, but no one should permit such practices in our present war emergency. The closed shop, with its tendency toward a labor monopoly, seems to have frozen labor practices, but the rank and file of American workmen have never taken second place in their patriotism and service to their country.

The great question involved seems to be whether the selfishness of group leaders shall be permitted to prevent unified patriotic effort in the winning of this war.

Railroads Add Real Efficiency To Huge Volume

Volume is not all there is to the job the railroads of America are doing in helping to work out a program for victory. Under private management, with fewer locomotives and cars than were available in 1918 or 1929, the carriers are handling their heaviest burden smoothly, without congestion, delay or car shortage. Every unit of the railroad plant is functioning at its highest efficiency.

Ever since the German invasion of Poland, the nation's demand for transportation service has steadily increased. Since our entrance into the war, this increase in transportation demand has been even further accelerated.

But in addition, the railroads have had to take over part of the transportation load formerly carried by other agencies. The rationing of gasoline in certain areas, the national shortage of rubber, the discontinuance of steamship service through the Panama Canal, the transfer of many coastwise vessels to other services, the sinking of our ships along our coasts—all of these factors have placed greater and greater burdens upon the steam lines.

New and Greater Demands.

For the first time in years the railroads are being called upon to bring Pacific coast lumber and the bulk of Pacific coast canned goods to the East; to take virtually all the Maine seed potatoes to the South, and to move most of the Florida citrus fruits to the North; to more than double the all-rail movement of bituminous coal into New England; to move the bulk of America's necessary importations of tropical fruits and Caribbean sugar from Gulf and South Atlantic ports.

At the same time, first attention always must be paid to the movement of troops and vital war material. Now that the chips are down, the railroads are disclosed as the one essential transportation agency in the nation that can do the job.

And what a job it is! With our stepped-up national production and with the loads transferred to the steam lines from other means of transport, rail freight traffic so far this year is running at a level 40 per cent above that of a year ago and 98 per cent above—or almost double—the volume of business handled in the same months of 1939. The passenger business thus far this year shows a gain of more than 50 per cent above that of the corresponding months of 1941, and a gain of more than 90 per cent above the same months in 1939.

Facts About 6th Registration

Instructions for conducting the 6th registration for Selective Service of young men who have reached their 18th birthday since last July 1 have been issued to all local boards in Illinois by Colonel Paul G. Armstrong, State Director. In accordance with the recent proclamation of the President, the hours will be from 9 A. M. until 5 P. M., with the exception that no registrations will be made on Sundays.

The Director pointed out that aliens who have been in the United States for less than three months are not required to register but if they remain for that period, they must either register or apply for an alien's determination of residence before the expiration of the three months period.

Also, he said, a man who has received a discharge from the armed forces or any of the other services must register for Selective Service if he has not already done so. A man released from active duty in the enlisted reserve corps is still subject to call and, therefore, need not register. Membership in the Illinois Reserve Militia or the reserve militia of any other state does NOT exempt a man from Selective Service registration.

Those subject to registration who were born on or after July 1, 1924 but not after August 31, 1924 will be registered on any weekday beginning Friday, December 11 and ending Thursday, December 17, 1942.

Those born on or after Sept. 1, 1924 but not after October 31, 1924 will be registered during the Week of Friday, December 18 to Thursday December 24, 1942.

The group born on or after Nov. 1, 1924 but not after Dec. 31, 1924 will register during the period Saturday, December 26 to Thursday, December 31, 1942.

The Director pointed out that in accordance with National Headquarters instructions, for the duration of the war, all who were born on or after January 1, 1925 will register on the day they attain their 18th birthday, providing that if such birthday falls on a Sunday or legal holiday they will register the day following.

It has been estimated that in Illinois approximately 30,000 young men will be registered between December 11 and December 31.

The sixth registration will be accomplished in the various local board offices. No special registration stations will be set up unless absolutely necessary. Any local board which covers a large territory, such as a county, or a suburban board which has several towns in its area, may set up one or more special registration stations. The local board chairman will be in charge of the registration in every board area unless his unavoidable absence makes it necessary for a board member to replace him. As in previous registrations, the services of volunteer registrars, who will serve without remuneration, will be accepted. Where it is absolutely necessary to establish special registration stations, the Director has instructed local boards, if conditions warrant, to set up these special stations in war production plants and railroad yards and buildings. Each such plant will be asked to furnish its own registrars.

Hours of registration will be from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M., on all registration days. However, all men waiting in line at 5 P. M. must be registered before closing the station.

Unlike other registrations, the Director said, National Headquarters has placed no restrictions upon the release of registration figures to newspapers in each local board area.

WHO is the greatest all-around ballplayer and who is the greatest all-around football player of all time? This doesn't include stars playing only one position. It is an argument that covers many positions, where versatility is the big idea.

We put the first problem up to Ed Barrow, the veteran director of the New York Yankees, who has been in the thick of the scuffle for some 50 years.

"My nomination," Ed says, "is Hans Wagner, when it comes to all-around ability."

"I'll tell you why. Wagner was a great outfielder with a great arm. I've seen him star at first, second, short and third. He was a first-class catcher. And one day I made him pitch—and he would have made a fine pitcher with that arm. He was the only man I ever knew who was above the average in all nine positions. He was the greatest shortstop."

"I'll go beyond that. He also was one of the greatest hitters baseball ever knew. He had no weakness. As Christy Mathewson once said, 'His only weakness is a base on balls.' Hans led the league eight years. He was a power hitter and a place hitter."

About Wagner

"Here's another angle about Wagner," Barrow continued. "He was one of the greatest base runners in the game. Here was a big, awkward 200-pounder who used to steal from 50 to 60 bases. Everyone knows how great Cobb and Ruth were. But I am talking about every angle that makes up baseball—outfield, infield, offense, defense, hitting, base running—I mean everything."

"Cobb and Ruth have been our two most phenomenal players. But Wagner could do more, in more positions, than either of them could. He was an amazing ballplayer. He was a great kid ballplayer, and he also was a star when he was 43 years old. Don't forget that."

"Hans had the greatest pair of hands that anyone ever brought to the game. He had a pair of hands that looked like hams, but they had a sensitive touch. They were live hands."

"I don't have to say anything about Cobb and Ruth. You know where they belong. Remember, I'm just telling you about a fellow who could do more things better than anyone else. I mean Wagner."

What About Football?

The player in football who matches Wagner in baseball is Jim Thorpe.

Thorpe, like Wagner, could do more things in a better way than anyone else.

Here's the answer—Thorpe was a great ball carrier, one of the best. He could run an end or crack a line. He was an exceptional kicker—punter, drop-kicker or place kicker. He was a good passer and a good pass receiver.

Thorpe had just one weakness. If he didn't happen to be in the mood, or in condition, on a certain day, he would put out only when he had to.

The reason Pop Warner picked Ernie Nevers over Thorpe was this—"Nevers gave me 60 minutes of everything he had," Pop said. "Sometimes Jim would and sometimes he would not. But they were two of the greatest I ever saw. Thorpe at his best was the best."

A Few Others

For all-around value I can add two others—Babe Ruth in baseball, Bronko Nagurski in football.

Ruth was a star pitcher, a fine outfielder, a pretty good first baseman, a great hitter. He was the greatest of all power hitters. And Babe is still prouder of his pitching than he is of his hitting.

The football entry is Bronko Nagurski. First, a star tackle; later a fine end; still later the greatest fullback I ever saw. As Steve Owen once said, "Nagurski is the only back I ever saw who could run his own interference."

Bo McMillin picks Cal Hubbard, now coaching at Geneva college—great end, great tackle, and probably the best line backer of all time. Cal, fast on his feet, weighed only around 250.

Then there is Dutch Clarke, another luminary of exceptionally high all-around class.

In checking back through this list, one of the most important factors is the length of time they played. How long could they hold the pace? Stamina and durability are qualities that can't be overlooked in any final summing up.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

IN THE opinion of Clark Griffith, 73-year-old president of the Washington Senators, baseball is faced with a rather dreary 1943 season and the outlook for his own club is considerably less than bright.

Griffith knows that the situation is serious but fully expects that the national game will escape wartime extinction. The problems of this war are tougher than they were in 1918. The constant drain of manpower is unparalleled. The transportation situation will have baseball magnates talking to themselves. But the silver-haired president of the Senators believes that baseball has a fighting chance to play out the coming season.

In 1942 President Roosevelt wrote to Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain

Landis, giving baseball the "green light" for that particular season. Griffith has indicated that a similar letter will not be forthcoming in 1943, and that baseball will have to rise or fall on its own merits.

A short time ago Griffith was campaigning for a shorter baseball season.

He finally called off his crusade with the explanation that "I'm not saying I'm against it. I'm just saying that I'm not pressing for it any more. If the others want a shorter season I'll vote for it."

Popular Demand

Griffith is a staunch defender of baseball on its own merits. "The people want baseball," he declared. "The soldiers want it. The war workers want it." Probably he remembered the widely-used picture of U. S. boys in the South Pacific, clustered around a radio listening to the World Series.

Griffith's own team has fared badly in recent years, and the 1943 season promises nothing in the way of improvement. The Senators have lost Sid Hudson, Walter Masterson, Bruce Campbell and Al Evans since the close of last season. Ossie Bluege was appointed manager, succeeding Bucky Harris. No manager—with the exception of the Phils' pilots of recent years—has faced gloomier prospects.

With the few good players they had lost to the armed services, the Washington club is one of the weakest in major league history. Even Griffith, to whom the admission of defeat is unthinkable, admits that "This is the worst team I've ever had."

Perhaps that's why Griff wanted a minimum of 60 night games next year. "We had 21 night games last year," he said, "and every one of them drew good crowds."

A Tough Job

Bluege has a tough job ahead. There's absolutely no reason to believe the 1943 Senators will be any better than they were last season. In fact, the opposite is true. But if it's at all possible, Bluege will have the boys playing heads-up ball. You'll hear no moaning from Ossie's vicinity. He'll give the best that's in him, and he'll expect the same from every man on the club's payroll.

Bluege was a hustler from the time he started in with the Senators in 1922 until he retired at the end of the 1939 season. He was a dependable, hard-working ball player. There was nothing spectacular about him. That he was a good ball player is evidenced by the fact that he led American league third basemen in fielding percentages in 1931; made the most assists in 1927, '28, '30 and '31. He participated in the most double plays in '23 and '32. He also tied the league record for most put-outs by a third baseman, totaling seven on June 18, 1927.

Bluege is popularly thought to have been a weak hitter. That perhaps stems from the fact that he struck out five times in a ball game back in 1923. However, he was a pretty fair clouter. His lifetime batting average for his 18-year big league career was .272.

Double Solution

General Manager Warren Giles of the Cincinnati Reds thinks there is a double solution to major league baseball's wartime manpower problem—livelier baseballs and a higher player limit. Increasing the player limit, he pointed out, would give a club more reserve strength when the club loses men to the service, and the livelier ball would help the veterans who have difficulty beating out a hit.

Giles suggested the two steps "as a possible means of keeping the sport interesting next year," despite the loss of many of baseball's biggest names.

"Increasing the player limit from 25 to 27 or 30 ought to give a club more strength so that if any one player goes into the service, the club won't be weakened too much."

The "rabbit" ball—if one can be designed without the use of critical material—would be a boon to recalled veterans whose batting eyes are good but whose legs have lost their zip.

Santa Claus Born In Famous Poem By Clement Moore

Santa Claus was born in New York on a snowy December night 120 years ago. He sprang full grown, clad in red and white, with eight reindeer and a sleigh, from the mind of Dr. Clement Clarke Moore when he wrote his famous poem, "A Visit From St. Nicholas."

The legend of St. Nicholas had come to the New world with the Dutch settlers in the Seventeenth century. Gradually the name of that figure became San Nikolaas and later Santa Claus.

There are several explanations of how Santa Claus happened to be born. One story tells that on Christmas eve, 1822, Dr. Moore was being driven to his New York home in a sleigh, and the tinkling of the bells on the horse's harness gave him inspiration for the verses.

Another story tells that Dr. and Mrs. Moore were packing Christmas baskets for the needy and found they were one turkey short. Though it was late, Dr. Moore went out to buy another. On his way home with the turkey under his arm he is said to have composed the poem.

Dr. Moore read his poem to his children on Christmas morning. When a friend had the verses printed in a Troy, N. Y., newspaper, he denied writing them, but later admitted their authorship.

The poem gained rapidly in popularity, and the picture it painted of old Santa has endured to this day.

"His eyes, how they twinkled; his dimples, how merry! His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry!

His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow, And the beard of his chin was as white as the snow;

That shook, when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly. He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf,

And I laughed, when I saw him, in spite of myself."

Short Course in Yule Card Etiquette

Each year at this time, when Christmas cards are about to be addressed, the question always pops up in the mind: "How shall we sign them?" Here are a few hints and suggestions that will help you along in making your decision:

● If you are a married couple all you need to do is sign, "Jack and Jane." For those that would require more formal address, sign the card: "Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jackson."

● If you have a small family you can sign the card: "Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jackson, Sally and Jane." For the informal address of the cards it could be: "Jim, Mary, Sally and Jane Jackson." It is always best to put the names of the child or children next to the mother's.

● If you are a married woman, living alone, you can sign your card, "Mary Brown Jackson"—the Brown being the maiden name. The general practice in such cases is also to put in parenthesis "Mrs. Jack Jackson."

● Young ladies, single, just sign "Sally Jackson" or just "Sally." If the acquaintance is casual Sally can precede her name with a "Miss" such as "Miss Sally Jackson."

But at Christmas time, informality is the general and prevailing note. Cards addressed to your friends should be as informal as possible without causing any affront to those receiving them. If you wish you can even add your own little personal note as might a young lady to her young man. Or as one pal would to another whom he hasn't seen, or heard from for a long time.

Make Tree Fireproof This Way—It's Easy

You can fireproof your Christmas tree by a simple method of letting it absorb the proper amount of ammonium sulphate. First cut the trunk of the tree at an angle or in a "Y" shape. Then weigh the tree and divide the weight of ammonium sulphate needed. Dissolve the indicated amount in water, using one and one-half pints for each pound of sulphate. Put this solution in a jar or bucket, set the tree in the solution in a cool place and leave it long enough for the tree to absorb the solution fully. Then the danger of fire is at a minimum.

'First Footing' in Britain Survives as Superstition

In England the superstition about the "first footing" still survives. Someone must go into the house before anyone comes out in the new year; otherwise some member of the family might pass away. Members of the family may be seen pacing up and down the walk about 10 minutes before midnight, waiting for the whistle, so he can come in out of the cold and bring good luck into his home for another year.

Patience

PATIENCE is the guardian of faith the preserver of peace, the cherisher of love, the teacher of humility. Patience governs the flesh, strengthens the spirit, sweetens the temper, stifles anger, extinguishes envy, subdues; she bridges the tongue, refrains the hand, tramples upon temptations, endures persecutions, consummates martyrdom.

Patience adorns the woman and improves the man; is loved in a child, praised in a young man, admired in an old man; she is beautiful in either sex and every age.—Bishop Horne.

Long-Term Lease

A lease for 20,881 years, held on a farm in the parish of Kirkhill, Scotland, covers a longer period than any similar contract in history, says Collier's. Drawn up in the early part of the 18th century, it was declared to be legal and valid by the highest Scottish court when the government attempted to confiscate the land after the Jacobite rebellion of 1745.

Prophetic Vision

"Yes, he comes of a very prophetic family. His father, for example, knew four months beforehand the day that he would die." "Remarkable. How did he know?" "The judge told him."

"What does your father say to my coming into the family?" "He asked me whether you were coming as a butler or what?"

Obliging

Judge (to plaintiff in compensation claim)—Now show the court the effects of the accident upon you. The plaintiff got up and painfully hobbled across the floor.

Judge—And now, to show the court the actual result of that accident, show us how you used to move before the accident. Plaintiff thereupon took a hop, skip, and jump across the courtroom.

Near Casualty

A bricklayer working on top of a high building carelessly dropped a brick which landed on the head of his colored helper below.

"You-all bettah be careful up dere," the helper shouted up. "You done made me bite mah tongue."

Teacher to Pupil—I've taught you everything I know and still you don't know anything.

Squaring Himself

Teacher (to class)—Now, children, I want you all to draw a ring.

Tommy drew a square. Teacher—Tommy, I told you to draw a ring, and you have drawn a square. Why?

Tommy—Mine's a boxing ring.

Loftiest Continent

The average height of land above sea for the whole world is no less than 2,100 feet. The loftiest continent is Asia, which stands at an average height of 3,000 feet. Africa and South America come second, each a thousand feet lower than Asia, and then North America, with 1,900 feet. The height of Europe is only 940 feet. The vast plains of Poland and Russia keep the average down. Of all the continents, Australia is the lowest, yet still its height is 800 feet above sea. The reason is that it is the oldest continent and has been above water longer than any other land. So most of its mountains have crumbled down and more than one-third of the area has not a hill left.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!
